

Catharine Lucas

DECEMBER GARDEN

Praise green shoots from deadgray stalks
always the recovery

surge and bloom

and bloom again

Our roses burgeon, fill the house

I prune back further enforce a rest

But even cut back—

especially then—

I feel the pulse pushing

rushing to sing

in my hand